This is the only real American
He fought in defence for his Country
to day he has no vote no Country and is not a citizen
but history will not forget him

Charles Marion Russell, renowned cowboy artist of the American West, expresses his loyalty to American Indians in this 1914 drawing.

Just a Hundred Years Ago

By Carl Sandburg

TWO LITTLE AMERICAN BURGS named for long-forgotten settlers, Gettys and Vick.... Two towns with no special claim to be noted or long remembered, till events wrote them red for all time as the turning point in the Civil War, just a hundred years ago this July....

Two towns, one turning point, for on the same day in 1863—the Fourth of July—Grant took Vicksburg on the Mississippi and Lee ordered a retreat to the Potomac after failing to win the terrible three-day Battle of Gettysburg. A heavy rain fell as the long gray columns turned south that night from their zenith.

Lee's Union opponent, General Meade, issued a congratulatory order

A silent cannon stands in the Gettysburg battlefield, commemorated in Carl Sandburg's 1963 magazine essay, "Just a Hundred Years Ago."
